

Dear Sir or Madam:

On Music Television's [MTV] "The Real World" reality-TV program that is aired in primetime, young adults are chosen to live in a house in San Diego, CA. There is an 19 year old female that lives in the house, her name is Cameran. Although she is obviously underage, MTV airs footage of her consuming alcohol in a completely obvious and non-educational manner.

MTV is clearly promoting underage drinking because they show this edited footage, yet leave in an underage female consuming alcohol to the point of intoxication as if it is perfectly normal and legal. They are clearly promoting an illegal activity, and MTV, nor Viacom, should get away with such a thing.

I urge you to look into this matter.

Thank you,

Christopher Peterson
